

Students will learn from home for the remainder of the 2019-20 school year

Dear Camden School Administration, Faculty and Staff,

Governor Andrew Cuomo announced today that schools across the state will finish the remainder of the 2019-2020 academic year with students learning remotely from home.

We know this is disappointing news to our students who miss their schools, teachers and classmates. We miss them as well! We also recognize that this is not the outcome that the Class of 2020 was hoping to hear, but we must move forward. We will do our best to both recognize and honor the Class of 2020 before the end of this year.

Now that we know the Governor's decision, our District's leadership team can finalize plans for the end of the school year and begin working to develop plans to reopen in the Fall. We will involve key school stakeholders in this process.

The last day of remote learning will be communicated as soon as it is determined following guidance from the New York State Education Department.

Thank you for supporting our students during this uncertain and difficult time.

We are committed to providing additional updates on a regular basis as circumstances warrant.

Stay Safe and Continue to Be Smart!
